windsor locks , conn.

As our journey ends, we realize how much he has lightened our load. His patience, understanding, and advice are looked upon with appreciation. In our senior year, his absence was felt, but he was ever present in our hearts.

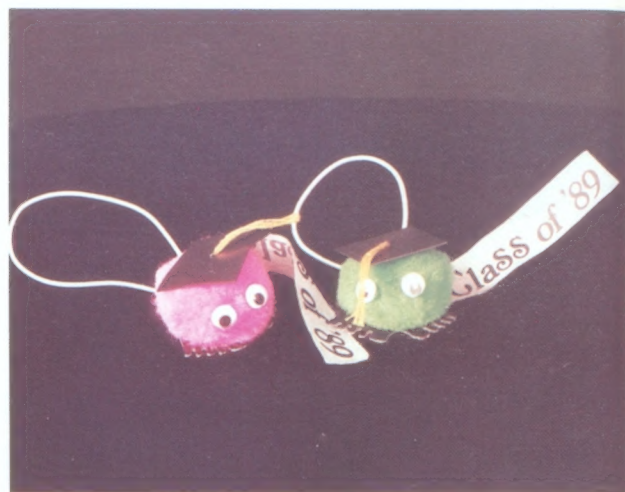

Because he is our adviser and our friend, we, the Class of 1989, proudly dedicate our yearbook to

Mr. George Anastasia

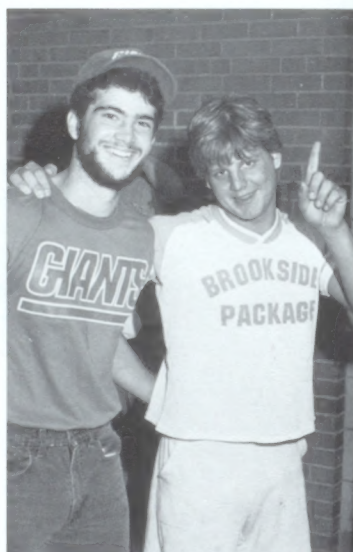

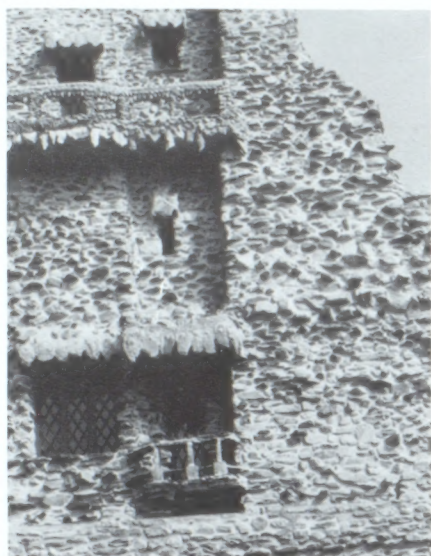

CLASS OF 1989

We've all been catered to by our servants, advised by our lords, and protected by our knights.

We've all been living within our stone castles, protected by the walls, the moat, and our individual monster which lurks in the murky water.

We've lived among the riches of our ancestors, but now it's time to find our own treasures,

to conquer our own new lands, and to eventually establish our own reigns and kingdoms.

We've been engaged in a four-year battle to find our own identities.

Now comes our true test of courage where long-forgotten boys will become knights, where little-known girls will become maidens.

All these aspirations race through our minds as we see the castle guard emerge.

Slowly he lowers the drawbridge and we are amazed by the world which begins to unfold around us.

Compliments of W. Quagliaroli/Evergreen Tree Service

Senior Class Officers

Mr. Robert Oliva — Adviser

Maria Oliva — President

Michael Collins — Vice President

Tracy Demaine — Secretary

Brenda Glamuzina — Treasurer

As the soldiers leave the castle and emerge through the open drawbridge, they realize the rules of the battle have been changed. Regardless of which castle the soldiers have come from, they've all been fighting to reach a common goal. Each fighter has been pushing forward to attack and conquer new uncharted areas of his individual aspirations. They are no longer members of the same crusade, their causes and their goals in battle have been altered. The soldiers must learn to lead their own charges, keeping in mind the strategies and the advice which they have acquired. Once the drawbridge has closed behind them, these soldiers can use their experiences to advise, counsel, and protect the troops of tomorrow.

As, we, the Class of 1989, leave the security of high school for the adventures in the outside world, we realize our lives have changed. Regardless of the interests we've pursued and the classes we've taken, we've all been working towards graduation. Each student has been striving to learn and to understand new topics in his unique interest in life. We, the graduating Class of 1989, are no longer contained by the walls of our high school, even our goals have been revised. We must learn to lead our own lives, by applying the skills that our teachers and our counselors have taught us. Once the doors close behind us, we must use our knowledge to better the lives of the future generations.
